

Deqiang Chang

Northeastern University

Deqiang Chang, who graduated from Northeastern University with a bachelor's degree in 2001, a master's degree in 2004, and a doctorate in 2013 in safety engineering. He has worked in Particle Technology Laboratory at University of Minnesota as a visiting scholar for one year in 2014. He became a lecture in the Safety Engineering Institute, Northeastern University of China in 2008. He has published more than 20 refereed journal papers and received 3 patents. Dr Chang's research has focused on ventilation and dedusting technology in the industry and mine, and on detection and control of occupational hazard. He is the Testing Office Director of Filter Test Center at Northeastern University of China which is a national level filter media test lab and the ONLY one lab authenticated by National Environmental Protection Ministry of China to certificate quality of filter media and fittings on bag house.